

Yennifer Martinez

Ms. Senff

English 9 Honors

1, March, 2018

The Biggest Hero

Each one of us has a different definition of a hero. One may think a hero is a person who has superpowers, great strength, and extraordinary abilities. To others, a hero is someone who they admire for their courage shown, outstanding achievements, or noble qualities. Each individual has once heard the phrase, “you are my hero.” Out of all people, Timothy Stackpole is considered the biggest hero.

Some may agree and some may disagree, but Timothy Stackpole has stood out the most out of all heroes. “After 21 years of fighting some of New York's toughest fires, including a 1998 blaze that almost killed him, firefighter Timothy Stackpole proudly served his first day as captain on Sept. 10,” not only does he show courage, but he also shows dedication to what his job is. Considering he has a whole family at home, yet he still risks his safe being for others. “With burns over 30 percent of his body, he was near death for many days, “ this was the aftermath of him saving someone. Timothy Stackpole once said, "The greatest high you can get in life is by helping somebody.” He would give up his life in order for someone else to be in a stable situation that’s just how noble his heart was.

Although Timothy is one of the most heroic people, Tamar Boggs and Chris Garcia were both said to be, “heroes” because they helped save 5-year-old Jocelyn Rojas. These two teenagers were considered both heroes but they wouldn’t claim themselves as one. "I'm just a normal person who did a thing that anybody else would do," replied Tamar Boggs to news reporter. They went out their way and started their own investigation, but Timothy Stackpole would still be the biggest hero out of all because he didn't dedicate his time for one or two days, but instead it was for 21 years. Tamar recalls he had huddled some of his friends to help in the situation, "We made our own little search party." Although they saved Jocelyn from being kidnapped, they wouldn't stick out as the most courageous hero out there. Mostly cause of the fact they worked as a team, so the situation could've changed if they had to do it on their own as an individual.

Last, we have Denise Miracle from American Airlines. She was an employee who realized quickly that two teenagers were in trouble. She is a hero because she took action and didn't let her gut feeling be ignored. "Authorities are crediting a quick thinking airline employee for preventing two teenagers from becoming victims of human trafficking," is a supporting fact explaining how she was a hero that day. Although she didn't get her customers as pleased with her, atleast she could feel tranquil knowing she had made a change. Denise Miracle wouldn't top off Timothy Stackpole because Denise the same way she was right about this suspicious situation, she could've been wrong about her gut feeling. As they say "not all heros wear capes."